

Confessions of a Shopaholic

Monday, 30 March 2009

I'm afraid this was not my cup of tea. Yes I know it's a "chick flick" but hey, I wanted to give an overview of a new movie. Rebecca Bloomwood (Isla Fisher) loves clothes & has the credit bill to prove it. All is not well in her world, so she decides to grab a new job on a money magazine as an advice columnist. No I didn't believe it either.

However as she is secretly "the girl in the green scarf" &hellip; Never mind I won't explain she uses her fashion flair to enhance the world of finance (Why didn't someone tell Obama he could have a job for her) naturally she bags the English spoken boss Luke (Hugh Dancy) and soon, and so on, and you've seen it all before. There are one or two laughs of a decent standard, but really it's not up to the mark. Isla Fisher shows promise & with a better script could shine. Hugh Dancy is not in the class of the other Hugh-as in Grant who is much better at this sort of thing. The teens will probably love it. I wished I could say the same.
